PRESS RELEASE

John F. Lauro, of the Lauro Law Firm in Tampa, Florida, announced today that the United States District Court for the District of South Carolina had entered an order acquitting his client, John H. Kang, of a charge of conspiracy to commit federal securities and mail fraud violations.

Mr. Kang was previously the President of Medial Manager Corporation, which later merged with WebMD. In December 2005, Mr. Kang, along with others, was charged in a seven count superseding indictment alleging that the defendants had engaged in a conspiracy to fraudulently inflate the market price of Medical Manager and WebMD stock. Throughout the legal proceedings, Mr. Kang asserted his innocence and vigorously defended his conduct as president of the company. Earlier this year, Mr. Kang and another executive went to trial in Charleston, South Carolina. Following the close of the government's case, Mr. Kang filed a motion to dismiss the charge based on, among other things, the government's failure to bring the case within the applicable statute of limitations. The Court reserved ruling on this motion pending a jury verdict. Although the jury found both defendants guilty, the Court today held as a matter of law that the government had not brought the case in a timely fashion, and therefore entered an order dismissing the charge and vacating the guilty verdict.

Mr. Lauro stated that: "we are thrilled with Court's decision today and particularly pleased that a judgment of acquittal will be entered on John Kang's behalf. Needless to say, we are all grateful that justice prevailed in this case, and that the Court entered a comprehensive and thorough decision finding Mr. Kang not guilty of this charge."

A copy of the Court's decision is attached.
